ruary 27, 1904. Groffs was a Washington man, convicted of conspiracy with Machen in bribery.GOVERNOR CARTER HAS FEARS OF THE PRESENT LEGISLATURE

(By Wireless to THE TRIBUNE.)

Honolulu, Feb. 7.—"I have had a number of Senators and Representatives calling on me today and yesterday," said Governor Carter to a Bulletin reporter this noon, "and I will tell you just what I told them, as I think it is a good thing that it be generally known."I do not anticipate that this Legislature will be as harmonious as the last one was. The overwhelming majority and the corresponding lack of a strong minority to act as a check makes it evident that owing to honest differences of opinion which will arise they will break in other than party lines; and what we cannot afford, and what the Territory cannot afford, is that they break on racial lines. I am only an individual and it will be much better if they break on Administration and anti-Administration lines. While I will suffer that can be borne much better than to have the Territory suffer as a whole."

Death of an Old Kamaaina.

Mary Ailau, daughter of Benjamin Pitman, one of Hilo's early pioneers passed away last Saturday evening at the home of Mrs. Cecelia Arnold, from an attack of Apoplexy. Some two years ago she had one stroke, from which she had not fully recovered. About two weeks ago she was taken down with the grippe, and was recovering from same, when on last Tuesday she had her second stroke, affecting her left side.
Saturday evening about 6:30 she grew worse, when the last and final stroke came, she living but twenty minutes. She was born in March 1841, in Honolulu, receiving her education in the Hawaiian schools and in the States. Shortly after her return to the Islands in 1883 she married Jack Ailau, a newspaper man and also a member of the Honolulu Band. He died about ten years ago, leaving his widow as his sole survivor. She had been associated with the Victor girls in the curio shop on Pitman Street near the Hotel, during the past few years. Her father and grand father came here in about 1833, and ran a general merchandise store on one corner of the present Hotel grounds, the family homestead being located where the Hotel is now located. Her mother was Kinoole Hoolulu, an aunt of Admiral Beckley, and was one of the chief-tesses of Hawaii. Pitman became very wealthy out of the then flourishing whale business, which was centered around the Islands, and when Hoolulu died, he succeeded to the position of the king's representative on Hawaii, having charge of all the royal, crown and public lands here.
He acquired considerable property, owning the whole of the Puuoa tract of 2,500 acres, and also about 300 acres of the Ponoahawai tract, commencing just above Pleasant Street and running 2 miles up the Kaumana Road. He also owned all the piece of property, where the Spreckels building now stands, and which has been the subject of controversy between C. E. Brown and Spreckels for the past few years. As Pitman's business increased he built a new store on the corner of Front and King Streets, where the Ick Sing Company is now located, and continued in business there until 1861 when he sold to Capt. Spencer. His store and that of Geo. More, located where the Coney House now stands, were the only two stores in the village during the lava flow of 1840, when night was as bright as day in Hilo. He had three children by his Hawa-ian wife, Mary being the eldest. The second, Henry Pitman was killed in the American Civil War, and Benj. F. Pitman, the youngest, is now located in Boston, and is a member of the firm of L. P. Hollander & Co. Pitman's second wife was Maria Kinney, who died before he left the Islands. After his return to Boston he again married, his wife surviving him but a few years. Pitman Street, where the Hotel is located is named after this early pioneer. The funeral of Mrs. Ailau occurred Sunday afternoon at 3 p. m. from the home of Mrs. Arnold.
Rev. Mr. Stewart officiating, and she was buried in the Hilo Cemetery.
She leaves no husband nor children.
